There will be a Training of Trainers for the prevention of substance abuse among young people. This training will look at the profound physical, social, and relational changes taking place during the critical time in a young person's life. Underlying factors that may contribute to youth being vulnerable to substance use will be examined. This training will also look at how we as educators, health workers, law enforcement, and therapists may play a key role in the prevention, intervention and recovery process for youth.

This training will look at how developmental risks play a role in the potential for substance abuse. It will also explore community-based strategies that are culturally relevant to help combat substance abuse.
